TIME DRAWS HER FOR DUBLIN

The great Eucharistic Congress to be held this year in Dublin, Ireland, draws near. Plans in the episcopal city of Ireland are making arrangements, and preparations are being made to take care of the great crowds expected.

Private and laymen from all parts of New England will sail from Boston, and to many it will be a homecoming to the old country of birth and ancestry.

President Edmund De Valera, it is announced, will deliver an address at the great state reception in Dublin Castle to be held for His Eminence Cardinal Lauri, the Papal Legate to the Eucharistic Congress, at which 2500 persons are expected to be present.

DE VALERA TO SPEAK
Mr. De Valera's address will be broadcast over the radio through the Dublin State station.

A leading Reath Presbyterian took a foremost part in the introduction of the resolution passed by the authorities of Dublin by which the freedom of the city will be extended to the Roman Catholics.

The talk will be free to the public.

SCIENCE CAN DEMONSTRATE TRINITY

An unusual book has just appeared from the pen of the Rev. Nathan R. Wood, head of Gordon College of Theology, titled "The Trinity of the Universe."

Dr. Wood in a little over two hundred pages takes the framework and spins into infinite mass the revealed word of God and as such I take it, no question asked, Dr. Wood does ask, questions, and he goes at his problem with a knowledge of physics, and an understanding of philosophy not in the least after the popular ministerial manner.

He may be one who believes first and now is proving his belief, but as far as the book is concerned he would be in no confusion step by step and fact based on fact.

ICE CREAM DIET BATTLE RAIDERS

By THE MASKED REPORTER

One of the most interesting and profitable of the new dieting schemes is the "ice cream diet," which is being promoted by a group of raiders who are known as the "ice cream diet raiders." These raiders are known as the "ice cream diet raiders" because they are raiding the pockets of the public by selling them the "ice cream diet" which is a diet of ice cream and other sweets.

"You look a lot better than this morning sun," said the Philosopher, who was sitting on the porch of the "ice cream diet" raiders. NOTHING TO DRINK

"Since these last three weeks, I've been told you, sir, all the cops from Boston Island to the tip of the iceberg, wherever that may be, couldn't find a drink of gin and tonic in the club named after the name of the 'ice cream diet' raiders. And that's just the way it is. The raiders are taking a lot of trouble to keep the cops from finding a drink of gin and tonic in the club named after the name of the 'ice cream diet' raiders.

STATE INCOME TAX LAW CREATED AS DECEPTION Supposed to Smoke Out Hidden Riches, Workers Bear Major Burden

That is the second in a series of articles dealing the policy, hazards, and impact of the state and federal tax systems and showing their impact on the worker.

The income tax law in this Commonwealth was created as a deception. It was supposed to smoke out hidden riches, but it has only served to burden the workers. The law is a deception because it is supposed to smoke out hidden riches, but it has only served to burden the workers.

SUGGESTION DREW FIRE

The suggestion that the income tax law in this Commonwealth was created as a deception drew fire from the tax authorities. They said that the law was not a deception, but it was a law that was supposed to smoke out hidden riches. They said that the law was not a deception, but it was a law that was supposed to smoke out hidden riches.

TREFFY GIVES FIRST HINT

Treffy gave the first hint that the income tax law in this Commonwealth was created as a deception. He said that the law was not a deception, but it was a law that was supposed to smoke out hidden riches. He said that the law was not a deception, but it was a law that was supposed to smoke out hidden riches.

We have no real idea as to how much a property is escaping taxation in this Commonwealth, said Commissioner Treffy in his statement before the committee last. "Our experience, however, has given us at least an idea of the amount. That is about all we have to go on at present."

AN UNCERTAIN PROCESS

"Experience shows that it takes about 40 years for all of that property to pass through this office. If some of it escapes and is not taxed, it will require another 40 years before we can secure an opportunity to get at it again. Of course only a small proportion of the total has passed through this office since the law of 1907 went into effect, but that proportion has given us a fair idea of what we may expect. Under the present law it is a slow and uncertain process to get at the tax on this property. My own opinion is that some form of a new tax would accomplish more speedily at a certain result. I have favored a constitutional amendment to permit of such a tax in Massachusetts. Even the income tax is an uncertain measure at present, because it has not been thoroughly tried in any state. It is an experimental measure. Massachusetts has such a tax. There have been taken the bill by the house and are trying the system to see how it works out, but they have not had it long enough to speak positively of results. A few other states are trying the income tax but it is purely a theoretical measure at present. I think that a constitutional amendment to permit of such a tax is the only way to get at the tax on this property."

MATTER FOR LEGISLATURE

"It looks good as far as it has gone. It seems the only way we can really get at this $800,000,000 of intangible personal property that we believe is taxable in Massachusetts. What percentage would be demanded under the income tax? I do not know, but that would be a matter for the legislature to fix. It is not easy enough to get what the return upon this $800,000,000 would be, however, for at 1 per cent it would bring in a tax of $8,000,000, at 2 per cent the State income from it would be $16,000,000, at 3 per cent it would be $24,000,000, and at 4 per cent the return would be $32,000,000, and at 5 per cent it would be as much as $40,000,000."

Asked as to the claim that the Commonwealth was already taking something to such an extent that it was driving business and property to other states, Commissioner Treffy replied: "That is a matter, of course, with which my department has nothing to do. The laws are clear in the matter of taxation, and we are here to enforce them. If taxation is bearing too heavily upon our industries or forms of property, that is for the Legislature to remedy and not for my department. Therefore, I am not qualified to speak on that matter. It is a matter for the legislature to fix. It is not easy enough to get what the return upon this $800,000,000 would be, however, for at 1 per cent it would bring in a tax of $8,000,000, at 2 per cent the State income from it would be $16,000,000, at 3 per cent it would be $24,000,000, and at 4 per cent the return would be $32,000,000, and at 5 per cent it would be as much as $40,000,000."

Oliver Seeks an Intrigue With Bill, But He Tells Her He's in Love With His Wife

NEVIS SAID to Oliver later that evening:

"These people here, Dana Hayes—his husband's one heck of a woman—is very charming," she added, with deliberate malice: "Bill thinks she's a knockout. She's one of those blonde who, somehow, doesn't take in this country. And there are a very nice couple or two and some bachelors, by the way, we'll have a dance for you. Linda has an enormous sequenced veranda and she'll be delighted to have you."

"I came to see you, darling, not to be entertained," said Oliver.

During the remainder of the afternoon they sat on the little porch and talked over at the moonlight and a distant glimpse at the sea. Oliver talked animatedly about her trip and her father, and the comforts of the yacht. She kept away from personalities, nothing unusual, thought Nevis, or did it fit into the new plot? "Before 6, Bill, in riding, and, looking, Nevis realized, with a sick heart, something strange and fanned and well, if a little later than when Oliver had known him, walked up the steps, whistled to Nevis, and said to her:

"Oliver? Not Oliver! Well, I'll be a son of a gun!"

BILL MEETS OLIVE

He had both her hands in his. He pulled them up and down, presumably, to see if they were the same. "How the Hades did you get here?" "Well, this is great. I've come to have a cigarette. How do you like our ship? Nevis, did she know she was coming, and didn't tell me?" he asked repeatedly.

Nevis said: "No, I didn't know until she walked in."

"They had dinner. They went walking. They dropped in to see me. They had a cigarette. I went out each other with a cool smile. I thought, she's very good-looking, and Oliver thought, I don't wonder."

"That night Olive lay in the small bed, and she had become more than fond of him, perhaps. He had been the first man she had met who had interested her since Bill Lancaster's abrupt departure from New York. She had, however, permitted herself to be caught on the first night. He had looked her over, and she had looked at him. He had been the first man she had met who had interested her since Bill Lancaster's abrupt departure from New York. She had, however, permitted herself to be caught on the first night. He had looked her over, and she had looked at him."

HAD NOT FORGOTTEN

She hadn't forgotten Bill Lancaster. Perhaps because she had never succeeded in possessing him. She had been so sure that she had him, almost, thought Olive, so coming down to Port. She had determined to give him a taste of her own medicine. She had been so sure that she had him, almost, thought Olive, so coming down to Port. She had determined to give him a taste of her own medicine."

Bill, in his own bedroom, said with an effort at adolescent coyness:

"What do you know about Olive hanging in and out of the ship?" He added: "She's changed some, hasn't she?"

"Not basically, I guess. If you know her manner, you know her. But I understand no one else ever looks with her long."

"Women," remarked Bill, grinning, "always with the knife out." He looked again at the picture. He had himself plenty for 28 years of a life."

Nevis said to Oliver: "I'll have to try to give her a good time."

"You're sure a good sport, Nevis," he said. "I'll give you a good time, but you've got to try to give her a good time."

"I'm all right," said Nevis. "I'll give you a good time, but you've got to try to give her a good time."

A little sympathy is a dangerous thing—especially to a man who is not very much of the other after the amassment of a spring romance.

Leap Year tip for ladies: I told you before that I like the pursuit of a lady. But remember that the lady who is not very much of the other after the amassment of a spring romance.

Direct is not a sign of moral courage. It takes far more courage to live amicably with the average man than to walk out to a good-looking lawyer and spill your year's and trouble all over his desk.

Flattery is its highest form is simply the art of making people like you.

Duck Dinner Fits in For Sunday

By MARTHA LEE

HOW ABOUT a duck dinner for Sunday? Especially with duck so attractively priced? This is the menu of the duck dinner served at the Martha Lee Cooking School this week:

Mini Fruit Cocktail
Chicken Gumbo Soup
Woodcock Relish
Roast Duckling with Special Dressing

Candied Sweet Potatoes
Buttered Asparagus
Vegetable Salad Supreme
Ice Cream with Chocolate or Butterworth Sauce
Tried Cherry Cuff

CHICKEN GUMBO SOUP
Make a rich chicken broth. Add to 2 cups of rice, 1 small can of corn, 1 small onion, chopped, 2 cups of celery, chopped, and 4 cups of strained tomatoes. Let simmer gently about 1 hour until the vegetables are tender, and serve.

WOODCOCK RELISH
Shred one fine cabbage, from which the hard core has been removed. To the cabbage add 2 finely minced onions, 1 cup of vinegar, 1 cup of oil, and 1 large spoonful of celery seed. Toss the salad together with a fork, after sprinkling generously with salt and pepper and 1 drop of mustard.

ROAST DUCKLING WITH SPECIAL DRESSING
Trim a duck, and season with salt and pepper. Rub with oil, and broil over a hot fire. When done, cut into 12 equal pieces. Dressing: 1 cup of oil, 1 cup of vinegar, 1 cup of mustard, 1 cup of sugar, 1 cup of salt, 1 cup of pepper, 1 cup of onion, 1 cup of celery, 1 cup of tomato, 1 cup of carrot, 1 cup of potato, 1 cup of corn, 1 cup of bean, 1 cup of pea, 1 cup of lentil, 1 cup of chickpea, 1 cup of lupine, 1 cup of soybean, 1 cup of mung bean, 1 cup of adzuki bean, 1 cup of black bean, 1 cup of pinto bean, 1 cup of navy bean, 1 cup of lima bean, 1 cup of kidney bean, 1 cup of great northern bean, 1 cup of cannellini bean, 1 cup of adzuki bean, 1 cup of black bean, 1 cup of pinto bean, 1 cup of navy bean, 1 cup of lima bean, 1 cup of kidney bean, 1 cup of great northern bean, 1 cup of cannellini bean.

Federal sales tax and excise taxes to replace the income tax, which has degenerated into a racket.

A Sane and Sure Tax and Relief Program

While the Mayors of twenty-nine great American cities, with Mayor Curley in a very prominent role, were adopting their program at Detroit for relief of unemployment, our own industrial leaders here in Boston were also putting their best foot forward.

The Mayors declared, inspired by Mayor Curley's forceful address, that the Five-Billion-Dollar National Prosperity Loan should be issued by Washington.

Millions of men would be put to useful work, in fact, they would be organized with the same enthusiasm for constructive enterprise and relief of suffering that the thirty American army was organized for the destructive pursuit of war only fifteen years ago.

Here in Boston, a score of leaders, with President Snyder of the Chamber of Commerce at their head, proposed to Washington a financial program, including UNANIMOUS INDOREMENT OF THE SALES TAX.

This would be a moderate tax upon a wide variety of articles, would impose no hardship upon the public and would produce the revenue which the government requires to put its house in order.

The two programs should be merged. Nothing better than the Five-Billion-Dollar Prosperity Loan and the sales tax has been produced for amelioration of the unfortunate conditions which exist today and for the restoration of normal conditions of employment, business and prosperity.

Along with them should be the elimination of the thing called prohibition and the return of the licensed manufacture and sale of beer and wine.

With these three projects in force, the government would derive its revenue, business would derive customers, idle men would derive useful work and the country as a whole would derive an escape from the infamous, abhorrent evils of the once noble but now despised experiment of prohibition.

Street Signs for Visitors

"Your editorial urging every New Englander to constitute himself a committee of one to induce some person or persons from other sections of the country to visit the vacation in New England was great. I am doing my part by writing to three Western friends today. Now go ahead and make the city officials put up same street signs so the tourists will be able to find their way around, once they come here."—From a Reader.

Brother, your idea is not to be sneezed at.

People who come here want to see Faneuil Hall, the Old North Church, Boston Common, Harvard College, Charlestown Navy Yard and the many other fine institutions which are so intimately associated with the history and life of the United States.

There should be an abundance of traffic signs not only indicating the most accessible way to all these points of interests but to the fine suburbs and resorts to the North and South of Boston as well.

The traffic officials and city fathers are not slow to absorb ideas. That is, not always slow. They should take up this one.

Wings for All Chillun

Flying has become simpler, but not yet simple enough for most of us. It means getting a technical education, knowing all about batteries and gadgets—then applying for a license. After that one must get a leather coat, boots and goggles. Then your flying contraption is parked "way out somewhere in the suburbs. It is all most unhandy.

A Munich engineer proposes to dispense with all this. He is perfecting a pair of wings that you can strap about on in a jiffy. A few graceful strokes and up you go, like a bird. Alas, leaves and Lilliputian tried it, though not with success. But this was before science made graphs of the wing movement of birds.

Every one has had the dream of flying. May not this denote the survival of a prehistoric instinct, when men flew around as did the bat or the ornithomachus? A great number of birds, also, are not so slick in the air as they used to be. The duck-billed platypus, the auk, penguin, for example. They prefer the round to this self-propulsion business. So shall we, until those Munich wings are fixed up fool-proof.

The Return of the Cob

Word from Kansas City is that the cornucop pipe factories are working overtime. The demand is growing for them, and large quantities are being shipped to Europe. And to think that when Mark Twain went over last the Missouri merschaum clamped in his jaws created some such sensation as did the first Ford in Tibet.

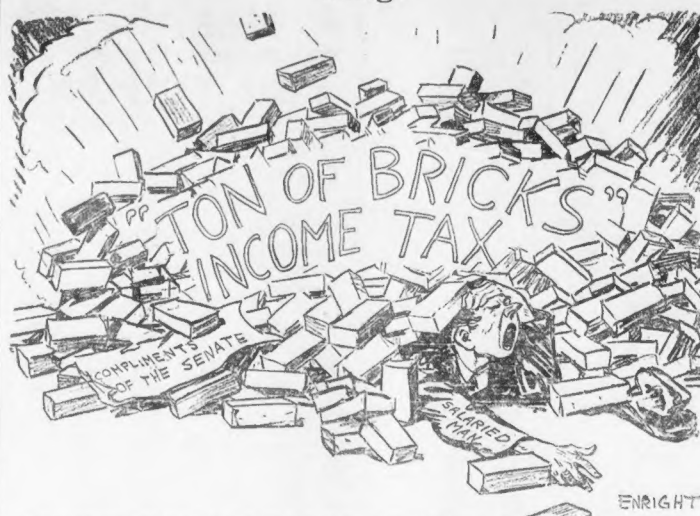

Of late, twenty million tons of coals a year have been ground up into stuff like acetone, diabetic sugar, paint remover, rayon and germinoids. We have seen evidence to thank for it in a jiffy. It is pleasant to think that cob has now returned to their noble function as pipes. And the planter they are, the better. Just sawed in two, bored and fitted with a reed. As perfect indicators for tobacco they stand unchallenged. That is, as E. L. Menckin affirmed, "Myself unvarnished, as God intended they should be."

Our Prankish Students

Perhaps it was all right to release the Harvard students who engineered the Harvard Square riot. Perhaps they blocked the streets, intimidated pedestrians, harassed autoists, assaulted streetcar conductors, tipped off the trolleys and terrorized passengers all in a spirit of blithesome fun. Maybe so. But the same judges should in the future show the same tender solicitude for the children of the poor and unindustrial who are haled into court for boyish pranks and too often sent to the reformatory.

Bing!

The tax bill now before the House and Senate conferees is a vicious slap at the creative, intellectual workers of the country: the business managers, members of the various professions, artists, writers—the salaried classes who contribute so largely to the balanced life of the nation.

Starting out to "soak the rich," the Senate wound up by seeking the salaried classes, thus paralyzing the initiative of these workers and discouraging their success in life.

The Senate bill is more oppressive, more discriminatory, more inimical than the House bill. For no good reason the Senate struck out the twenty-five per cent reduction from taxable income of earned income, thus presenting the anomaly of permitting corporations to deduct from taxable incomes reserves for depreciation, depletion and obsolescence, but denying human beings the same right.

Here in Massachusetts the earners of small incomes are treated with the same contempt of their rights and the same disregard of their justice. They are paying extraordinarily high income tax rates and the Legislature is being urged to deluge them with another "Ten of Bricks" in the form of an increase of 10 per cent of their already high rates. Some day they will get out from under the heap and start throwing bricks in the form of votes at the political heads of the legislators who have used them as targets year in and year out. Two can play that game.

Budget Balanced: Now Unemployment Relief

By Claude G. Bowers

THE SENATE has passed the tax bill for the balancing of the budget, and there never has been a moment when there was the slightest justification for a fear that it would not. One thing has stood out like a challenge from the moment the huge Hoover deficit appeared—that the budget would have to be balanced, no matter how onerous the taxation necessary.

With the almost illimitable natural resources of the nation unimpaired, there has been no doubt as to the capacity of the nation to meet its obligations. But with the problem of increasing taxes in one year, by an amount but recently considered extravagant for the entire cost of government, it has been no easy problem. The enormous loss in incomes has reduced the efficacy of the income tax in bringing revenue to the government.

The enormous loss in trade has correspondingly reduced the revenue from the corporation tax; and the sales tax, which is adopted in other countries, being now levied, was vigorously opposed. It was inevitable that there should be a clash in views and methods.

When, not so very long ago, the House rejected the Democratic tax measure or the measure sponsored by the Democratic leaders, it was Garner who appeared upon the floor to call attention to the effect on the American dollar, on public confidence, and to plead for the balancing of the budget regardless of how much it might hurt.

This week the President appeared in the Senate with a similar plea.

The Three Great Democracies

The President appeared to view that democracy has something to do with our failure to act in greater speed. A great deal has been made of this idea today.

But it just so happens that there are more democratic institutions and methods in England than in the United States and the democracy of England has shown greater capacity for grappling with just such a crisis as ours than any other country in the world. The democracy of France found a way speedily to balance the budget. The trouble with democracy here is with the people working with democratic methods.

The three great democracies are England, France and the United States. The first two had no trouble doing the necessary thing; if the United States has had some trouble and some delay it is due to the fact that our people have been misled by the propaganda of the English, more prone to whine over the inevitable, more disposed to shunt all the burden to others, or to other classes.

The sooner we come to know that we are all embarked on the same bottom and must sink or swim together, the better.

But the balancing of the budget does not put jobs men to work; it does not increase the purchasing power of the thirty millions and more who cannot buy; it does not restore our lost markets across the sea, the loss of which has cost two million breadwinners out upon the streets.

The assurance we have and that with the help of the budget all would be well is a false assurance. All is not well; all will not be well until Congress takes steps to create jobs on public works that will revive trade; and all will not be well until something is done to re-open the foreign markets that have been closed to us.

The Issue Is Clearly Made

Mr. Garner went before the Ways and Means Committee on the day the President appeared before the Senate with the demand that something be done for the unemployed. He asked a question no one answered:

"Can any one of you go back to your districts and admit there are people starving in this Republic and that you refuse to do something about it?"

Here, too, is a test of the capacity of democracy, which does not so much impress Mr. Hoover. In an address to the Senate he referred to the old fallacy to which he particularly alluded, that it is not the business of the nation's government in a national crisis to prevent starvation or to create work when as many as twenty-five per cent of the population are refused their inalienable right to work.

This is not a local depression, a local crisis, a local problem; it is the greatest national crisis in the history of our nation. It is a problem this republic has never solved.

But Mr. Hoover has told us again and again that it is the duty of the individual, of the neighborhood, of the State, to prevent starvation and to create work; that the Government of the people of the United States ought not to be asked to assume this problem.

On this proposition the issue is clearly made.

Now that Congress has taken steps to relieve the banks, railroads and corporations with general consent because of the gravity of the situation, now that the budget has been balanced, there is one more duty that Congress dare not ignore. It is the duty of the United States government to take steps to relieve the thirty million people involved in misery because of the lack of work.

They Want Work and Bread

And quite as much as to the balancing of the budget, the words of the President apply in reference to unemployment relief on a scale in keeping with the magnitude of the crisis.

"In your hands of this moment is the answer to the question whether democracy has the capacity to act speedily enough to save itself in emergency."

Different plans are now pending in House and Senate; and it is agreed that something must be done. Some have just enough sense to make it possible for them to say that they have not ignored the problem of others, wiser far, and with a keener appreciation of the millions who are denied their right to work, want to do whatever is necessary actually to meet the crisis.

If America is as loyal to America as in days of war she will not so as she does in war and adopt a program of public works that will get results. It is not going to "have democracy" with the millions out of work told that we have balanced the budget; their answer is that they want work and bread.
